Moon Rock Turns Out to be Fake

<https://phys.org/news/2009-09-moon-fake.html>

Astronauts who landed on the Moon collected 2,415 samples of Moon rocks weighing a total of 842 pounds (382 kilograms). Most of these rocks were collected during the Apollo 15, 16, and 17 missions. Image Credit: NASA

The Space Race

The US government deemed it vital that it win the Space Race against the Soviet Union. Going to the Moon would be risky and expensive, as exemplified by John F. Kennedy famously stating that the United States chose to go because it was hard.

A main reason for the race to the Moon was the Cold War. Philip Plait states in Bad Astronomy that the Soviets—with their own competing Moon program and a formidable scientific community able to analyze NASA data—would have cried foul if the United States tried to fake a Moon landing, especially since their own program had failed. Proving a hoax would have been a huge propaganda win for the Soviets. Bart Sibrel responded, "the Soviets did not have the capability to track deep spacecraft until late in 1972, immediately after which, the last three Apollo missions were suddenly canceled."

Vietnam Coincidences?
It is claimed that the landings helped the US government because they were a popular distraction from the Vietnam War and so manned landings suddenly ended about the same time that the US ended its role in the Vietnam War.

No doubt that man has made it into space. However, there is much doubt as to whether any man has ever gone beyond the radiation shield provided by the Van Allen Belt, which completely surrounds the planet.
